

Teesside University International Business School Link Practitioner Terms of Reference

As a modern enterprising and dynamic business school we offer our students the perfect blend of academic excellence, entrepreneurial thinking, and real-world orientation. We achieve this by ensuring our students have access to real-world, practice-based opportunities from the day they join us until the after they graduate. We are completely committed to working with our industrial partners to develop confident, enterprising and proactive graduates who are: civic in thinking, enterprising in attitude, collaborative in action, global in outlook.

As a Link Practitioner you will help Module Leaders to develop 'real world' practice in the curriculum and support students to enhance their knowledge, skills, behaviours, and experience. In other words, you will help our students to become 'work ready'. We are looking for practitioners who would like to be involved. You will commit to:

- Supporting a nominated a Module Leader to exchange knowledge and help inform the curriculum
- Deliver a minimum of 1 inspirational guest lecture each academic year in the relevant subject area
- Participate as an external consultant (when required) at course approvals and reviews (no more than once per annum)

You are likely to have:

- A passion for your topic and a willingness to share this with our student community
- Understanding of Higher Education and previous collaboration with students is desirable but not essential
- Access to extended networks to broaden the reach of Teesside University International Business School

In return Teesside University International Business School will:

- Keep you informed of the latest opportunities to access student and graduate employability opportunities including internship/placements, student projects and graduate recruitment
- Provide you with opportunities to engage with our technical solutions for business including consultancy and commercial research
- Provide you with the latest opportunities to access our talent development and management solutions including corporate executive education
- Provide you with information to access, support and leverage the latest funding opportunities to support business growth
